John Hofmeister

CEO and Founder—Citizens for Affordable Energy

Friday, February 15, 2013

7:30 a.m. - 9:00 a.m. (Continental Breakfast)

UC San Diego Faculty Club

"Private Energy Investment: The Stimulus of the Century"

John Hofmeister is a key member of the United States Energy Security Council, a bipartisan group that includes former Secretary of State George P. Shultz and two former secretaries of defense, William J. Perry and Harold Brown, as well as three former national security advisers, a former CIA director, two former senators, a Nobel laureate, a former Federal Reserve chairman and several Fortune-50 chief executives.

Upon retirement from Shell Oil Company in 2008, Hofmeister founded the 501(c)(3), not-for-profit nationwide membership association Citizens for Affordable Energy. He heads this Washington, D.C.-registered public policy education firm that promotes sound U.S.-energy security solutions for the nation, including a range of affordable energy supplies, efficiency improvements, essential infrastructure, sustainable environmental policies and public education on energy issues.

As president of Shell, Hofmeister launched an extensive outreach program, unprecedented in the energy industry, to discuss critical global energy challenges. The program included an 18-month, 50-city engagement program across the country during which Hofmeister led 250 other Shell leaders to meet with more than 15,000 business, community and civic leaders, policymakers and academics to discuss what must be done to ensure affordable, available energy for the future.

A business leader who has participated in the inner workings of multiple industries for more than 35 years, Hofmeister also has held executive leadership positions in General Electric, Nortel and AlliedSignal (now Honeywell International). He is the author of Why We Hate the Oil Companies: Straight Talk from an Energy Insider (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010). Hofmeister serves as the chairman of the National Urban League and is a member of the U.S. Department of Energy's Hydrogen and Fuel Cell Technical Advisory Committee. He serves as nonexecutive director of the Hunting PLC, London, UK; Lufkin Industries Inc.; CAMAC Energy, Inc.; and the Sodexo North America Business Advisory Board. He is an adviser to Liberty Power of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the nation's largest minority owned power company. Hofmeister also serves on the boards of the National Energy Security Council, Washington, D.C.; the Foreign Policy Association, New York; Strategic Partners, LLC; the Gas Technology Institute; and the Center for Houston's Future. He is a fellow of the National Academy of Human Resources, and is a past chairman and serves as a director of the Greater Houston Partnership. Hofmeister is active in education, serving on the Energy Advisory Board at the University of Houston, and is also a director of the Texas Education Reform Committee.

Hofmeister earned bachelor's and master's degrees in political science from Kansas State University. In May 2010 he was awarded an honorary doctorate of letters from the University of Houston.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Business and Psychology: Decision Making, Rationality, and Creativity

Featuring Craig R. M. McKenzie

Rady School of Management and Department of Psychology, UCSD

Wednesday, February 6, 2013
5:30pm, UC San Diego Faculty Club

Most business disciplines have traditionally assumed that people are rational. Because psychologists who study decision making have obtained evidence that people violate rational principles, the importance of psychology in business has increased dramatically in recent years. Psychology, like any discipline, is constantly evolving, and psychologists often disagree about the interpretation of apparently irrational behavior. Many psychologists believe that improving decision making involves increasing rationality.

Craig R. M. McKenzie holds a joint appointment in the Rady School of Management and the Department of Psychology at UC San Diego, where he has been a professor since receiving his Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Chicago in 1994. He has a general interest in the psychology of inference, uncertainty and choice, and his research has won awards from the National Science Foundation, the Operations Research Society of America and the Society for Judgment and Decision Making.

Supper Club events include a wine reception, full dinner, and Faculty Club parking in addition to the lecture. For reservations and additional information contact Marcie Marsh at 858-246-0372 or by email:
